

Mid-Manhattan Library
presents

Story Time for Grown-Ups

Love a good story?

Sit back and relax as we read you a story or two.

September 2014—Featured Author

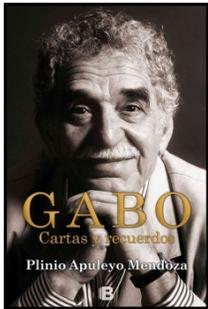

Gabriel García Márquez

Wednesday, September 10, 1:00 pm

Monday, September 15, 7:00 pm

A Very Old Man With Enormous Wings

Light is Like Water

Wednesday, September 24, 1:00 pm

Monday, September 29, 7:00 pm

I Sell My Dreams

Tramontana

All readings will take place on the 1st floor Room 101

MID-MANHATTAN LIBRARY

455 FIFTH AVENUE | NEW YORK, NY | 10016

212-340-0837

 midmanhattanlibrary

 @midmanhattanlib

New York
Public
Library

 This branch is fully accessible to wheelchairs

Wednesday, September 10, 1:00 pm

Monday, September 15, 7:00 pm

A Very Old Man With Enormous Wings

Translated by Gregory Rabassa

On the third day of heavy rain Pelayo and Elisenda were frightened when they found an old man lying face-down in the mud in their rear courtyard. He was dressed in rags and nearly bald, and he couldn't get up because his two enormous wings were hopelessly stuck in the mud.

Light is Like Water

Translated by Edith Grossman

What if light had the same properties as water? When you turned it on, it would flow and fill up a room and spill out the windows. You could even float a boat on it or swim in it.

Wednesday, September 24, 1:00 pm

Monday, September 29, 7:00 pm

I Sell My Dreams

Translated by Edith Grossman

I first met her in Vienna after World War II. We never knew her real name; we called her Frau Frieda. She made her living selling her dreams about other people, which always seemed to come true.

Tramontana

Translated by Edith Grossman

The tramontana is a harsh wind that blows in the spring and fall, and it carries the seeds of madness and death, according to the natives of Cadaqués, a beautiful old town on the Costa Brava.

All programs are FREE and subject to last minute change or cancellation.

This branch is fully accessible to wheelchairs